

Climate change is happening

How are we going to adapt?

The over-consumption of resources in faraway cities is affecting our Arctic homeland. Coastal erosion is forcing us to consider protections and possible relocations of our communities. Melting sea ice is changing how we subsist and sustain ourselves. We must adapt and evolve, but we need an economy to do so. New problems require a new way of thinking – we must be proactive in monitoring these changes and creative in our response.

Our voice. Our vision.

voiceofthearticinupiat.org

@VOICE_Arctic

@VoiceoftheArctic